Experience

“After my consultation, I felt the doctor had addressed most of the questions I had. When I arrived for my pre-op appointment before surgery, I didn’t have a lot of questions and I felt comfortable with my decision to have surgery.

I was genuinely excited the day of my surgery. I was a little bit nervous about the unknown. I didn’t know if I would experience pain and I was worried how I would look after surgery. I was nervous about anesthesia. However, the one thing that kept coming to mind was “I am going to look so good!”

I kept thinking about how wonderful it was that I was going to have surgery in such a great environment. The nursing staff was so kind and professional. They seemed so happy and excited with me – like a good friend would be. My doctor had a warm and reassuring smile and he was very gracious. His bedside manner was second to none. I felt confidence in the care I was receiving and knew that it would continue throughout the surgery and recovery. The anesthesia staff sensed my nervousness and immediately made me feel at ease.

During my recovery, I called the office with questions and they were always supportive and warm. My husband was my support person and he took good care of me and was very attentive. I honestly did not feel a lot of pain, which surprised me. I tried not to rush the healing process because I knew that a beautiful swan was emerging!
